Foreword

This book contains the facts, who, where, when, but not the story of our family. If you can add to our history or have an anecdote to tell, then please share it and help make our story come alive. Even little things, like your cousin the fisherman who didn't eat fish, will make our story more personal. If you can add to our story, please contact me! I hope to have at least a photo of everyone who is here. It is amazing how often there is a close resemblance for relatives separated by generations.

Introduction

The following pages list data for all known family members as of 13th December 2020.

Each immediate family is presented in their own section that contains a graphical family tree as well as a description with information about each referenced person and their children. The child section provides information about the children of the preceding couple. When a child has offspring of their own this is presented in a separate family section for that child. In this case a '+' is used to denote that an individual will appear later in the book as a parent with his/her own children and there is a link to the appropriate family reference number. For children with partners but no offspring the partner data is given with the reference family. Roman numerals, followed by a period, are used to indicate the birth order.

In the chapter titled "Family of the Starting Person" the ancestors of Thomas Sears are presented in a kind of enhanced Pedigree Chart which displays the graphic representation of their direct-line ancestors and the children of the couple. This chapter contains information about the couple whose relatives are listed in the later chapters.

The chapter titled "Families of his Ancestors" provides details (as known as of the publication date) for the relatives of Thomas Sears. There is a chapter for each generation. Relatives are listed in the order of the nearness of their relationship.

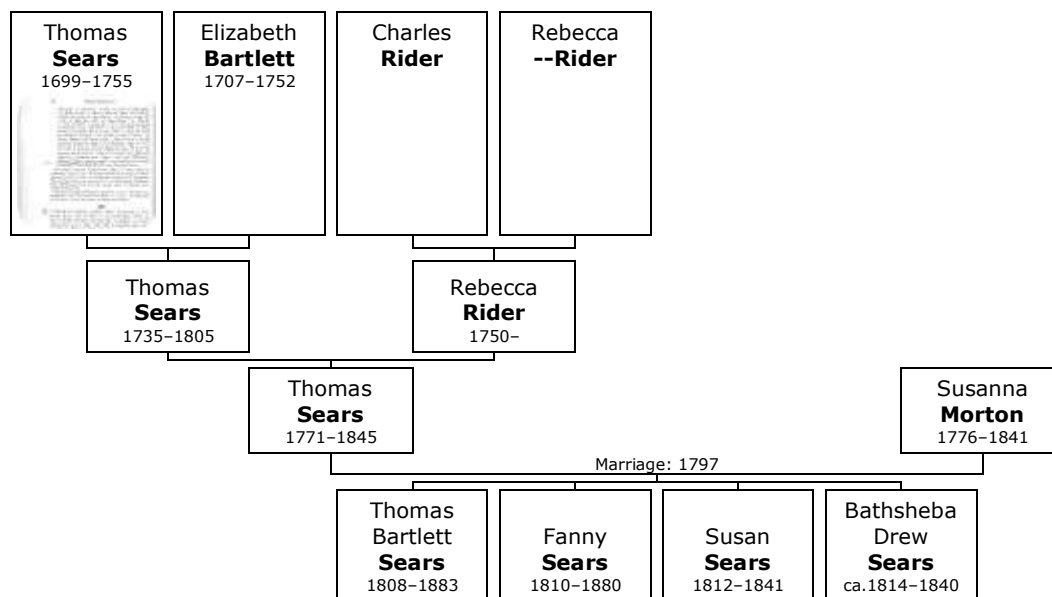

Sources for the information provided are given in the footnotes.

This document reports the details of 142 individuals, of whom 71 are male and 70 are female. The sex of one individual is unknown. Of the 93 individuals with recorded birth and death dates, the average lifespan was 61.26 years. Of these, 52 males averaged 62.27 years, and 40 females averaged 60.8 years. The longest living male was Capt Benjamin Warren Sears (1831–1927), who died aged 95. The longest living female was Marian Vaughn Sears (1902–2001), who died aged 99.

!S.P. May p.83 The will of Thomas Sears of Plymouth, dated July 2, 1755, was allowed July 17; Jeremiah Howes, Execr; it names wife Mehitable, sons Thomas and Willard, and daus. Bettye, Rebecca, Chloa, Sarah and Mary Sears. The inventory of widow Mehitable Sears, late of Sandwich, was filed Feb. 6, 1769, by Prince Tupper, Admr, and foots up £ 26 13 8. The children's names are perhaps not placed in the order of their birth; the town records are very imperfect, but the old church records, which I have not examined, may give further data. !Colonel John Fellows- Regiment. Colonel John Fellows' Minute Men's Regiment 1775.

8th Regiment Army of the United Colonies 1775.- by Frank A. Gardner, M.D. [The Massachusetts Magazine, July, 1909, 2:3, p. 141-161]. The Muster Rolls Except for the rolls of eight companies which are only available in the original, the muster rolls which are the basis of the data were studied on microfilm at the Archives. They are in relatively good condition and, although some individuals' names are difficult to decipher, generally easy to read. They are kept largely in three volumes-XI, XII, and XIII-of the Revolutionary Rolls and are arranged in rough alphabetical order under the captain of the company's name. The eight companies' rolls which are found in other volumes are in volumes XIV to XVII and XX. How complete are the muster rolls? There are two levels at which to look at this problem. First, a few individual rolls have been damaged over time so that not all the names have been preserved. In some cases the edges of the roll have decayed so that first names written close to the edge, are often unreadable. In other cases the bottom portion of the roll has worn off so that the names of some privates have been lost. The ink has faded on some rolls making reading difficult, and in two of the 441 companies' rolls, it has faded to the point of illegibility. Thus, the number of companies used in most of the analysis is 439. If the loss from decay has had any effect, it would be in the count of company size in List One rather than in the listing of officers in List Two. But the number lost appears to be so small that any difference in the figures from the original is negligible. Second, how complete are the rolls in the larger sense of the number of companies that marched in response to the Lexington Alarm. This is more difficult to determine. Some of the most important participants in the event are not included in the data. Captain John Parker's name is not on the lists. The first activity for which an extant muster roll was filed by Parker, listed in Massachusetts Soldiers and Sailors, is for service during the siege: "John Parker. Captain in Command of a Detachment from Lexington militia Company; service, 5 days; detachment reported on command from May 6 to May 10, 1775, by order of the Committee of Safety."<sup>54</sup> Likewise, the Concord companies under Captains David Brown, Charles Miles, and Nathan Barrett are not represented. Nor are those of Jonathan Wilson of Bedford, Isaac Davis of Acton (who was killed at Concord), and John Brooks of Reading.<sup>55</sup> These are significant gaps. One explanation for the absence of muster rolls of these companies is that the towns themselves paid their militiamen.<sup>56</sup> Although this is surely possible, it is difficult to imagine why the towns would do so, since the Provincial Congress had authorized payment. Would local pride be carried to such an extent? Another possible explanation is that some companies did not file muster rolls. This does not seem any more likely, however, for pecuniary reasons. Since the pay of their men was at stake, there was great incentive for captains to complete and file the muster rolls. A captain who was slow about completing his roll was undoubtedly prodded by his men until he did so. Thus, financial incentive tends to work toward the completeness of the data.<sup>57</sup> The most obvious explanation of the gaps is simply loss of the material through the years before it was lodged in the Archives. The completeness of the data can, perhaps, only be answered by the coordinated efforts of local historians. Internal evidence indicates, however, that it is nearly complete. For instance, one company under Asa Whitcomb noted on its muster roll that the colonel had thirteen companies under him, and data for eleven is available. Therefore, either the two remaining companies did not march, marched and filed a roll but did not give the name of their colonel (many did not), marched but did not file a roll, or marched and filed a roll which is not extant. Considering all these possibilities, eleven out of thirteen is a high percentage. Although the lists presented here are not complete, based as they are on the muster rolls in the Archives, and although local researchers will discover gaps immediately, the data is nearly complete. There is much information given on the muster rolls. Typically, across the top of the paper is written an introduction to the roll which gives the captain's (or other commanding officer's) name, the date marched, and the reason for marching. Some rolls also give the name of the colonel of the regiment to which the company belonged and others give the place of rendezvous as well. The body of the roll consists of columns listing the men's names and towns, the date marched (if not given in the introduction), the days in service, the miles traveled in the round trip, the pay for days in service, the pay for travel, and the total pay. The reason for filing the muster rolls was to receive pay from the colony for the men. Chapter 370 of the Resolves of the Provincial Congress, entitled "Resolves providing pay for the militia who came on the alarm at Lexington," was passed November 9, 1775, and it fixed the rates of pay and the process by which it could be received. All those who were in command of a company were directed to make up a Roll of the Travel, and Service of himself, and the said Men under his Command who did not inlist into the Colony Army, and therein exhibit the Number of miles which each Man Travelled from, and to his Home at one penny per mile for the Expencc of travelling; and also the Time which each man was in Service, computing from the Time he left Home to the Time he left the place of Rendezvous; and also allowing one Day for each Twenty Miles from said place of Rendezvous to his Home, and with Regard to such Men as Marched as aforesaid and inlisted into) the Army, each Captain, or other Officer as aforesaid is respectively directed to exhibit in his Roll the Time of such Mens Service, computing from the Time they left their respective Homes to the Time they inlisted into said Army without exhibiting their Travel as that is already order'd to be inserted to in the Rolls, which the Officers under whom such men inlisted are directed to make up, and return. 62 The pay scale passed in the November 9 resolution was:64 Captain £6.00 per lunar month Lieutenant, 1st 4.00 Lieutenant, 2nd 3.10 Ensign 3.10 Sergeant 2.80 Corporal 2.40 Fife and Drum 2.40 Private 2.00 Samuel Adams, Truro. Charlotte Morton lived w/ T.B. Sears "Then my Uncle Thomas Bartlett Sears.

Like Mr. Scott, his manner was always quiet and dignified, and though he owned about three times more property than the average farmer of the community, he, too, was a man whose advice and counsel were sought and followed often by less fortunate men." "These were the three men I knew well, and often saw consulting with each other over vital issues of the community, and witnessed the deep respect in which they were held." The three men are T.E.Scott, for which Tescott was named, Charlotte's Uncle Tom Sears and her father, Howard Morton.

"Now I would like to give you a word picture of the two families, Sears and Morton, when they were living side by side in adjoining farms. There were only three children born to Thomas B. Sears and his wife Katherine: Fred Coleman Sears, Thomas Bartlett Sears and Kate B (I think "B" was for Bartlett) Sears. Kate was the oldest.

! The Morton family had nine children: Mary, Helen, Katherine, Howard, Nathaniel, Jessie, Charlotte, Ruth and Lucie.

The four parents of the two families all came from Massachusetts. The two men were first cousins, the two women were sisters. This and the fact that they lived close together and had at first great hardships to overcome, made them almost like one family in interest and affection. The Searses were much better off than the Mortons, for obvious reasons, namely smaller family and much larger farm. The three Sears men and the three Morton men toiled as only pioneer farmers those days did toil, from dawn to dark, sometimes by moonlight.

No motor-driven machines or vehicles in those days, just hard grinding hand and horse labor. But when the day's work was done, both families enjoyed a fully cultured life. All four parents had known wealth and culture of the East in their youths, and somehow they achieved it for their children in their homes.

! At first during the time of birth of all three Sears children and the older Morton children, the struggle was severe just to earn necessities; but by the time the older children were ready for higher education, the Searses were quite "well off" and the Mortons able to put their children through high school. The Sears children went away to college, and their father was able to pay for hired help. I believe that is the reason the present generation, even the older people of Tescott, know so little about the Sears family. As soon as the Sears boys had graduated (from KU at Lawrence and KSAC at Manhattan) they both married girls they had met in college and settled down wherever their work took them.

Their parents (Tom and Kitty) and Kate who never married, sold their farm and moved to Lawrence. So the Sears family who, in my clear memory at the turn of the century were very prominent and influential around Tescott, regularly attending the "Army of the Republic" -(veterans of Civil War) the "Dorcas Society" -(wives of veterans), the WCTU and all civic gatherings close friends of Mr. and Mrs. T E Scott" "I siezed on the opportunity to make a big effort to revive the memory of the Searses in that connection."

"The main reason that I felt so very deeply about the Sears family is that from the time I was three to six years old, and that means my earliest recol-lections, -I lived with the Sears family. That was 1890-93. My father, Howard Morton, ran for Probate Judge of Ottawa Co. and was elected in 1890; rented out his farm and moved all of the family but me to Minneapolis for four years. Ruth was a baby-in-arms when they moved, and the Sears family offered to keep me with them for awhile. My folks in Minneapolis of course had no horses there and there was then no other way to travel than "horse-and-buggy"; the Searses were too busy to take the long trip, so I never saw my own family for several years, and as I did not remember them, I just thought I was a Sears!

When, after several years, my Aunt and Uncle did make the (all day) trip to Minneapolis with me, and I played all day with my little relatives and neigh-borhood children, I was wildly excited; and when my Aunt said "Come on, Gusty, we are going home now," I burst into tears and sobs. Looking back now, I realize how that must have hurt my Uncle and Aunt, who had tenderly cared for me for three years and with whom I was really very happy and dearly loved them. But the Searses are a notably "proud" people. My Aunt said, "Well, Tom, if thats the way Gusty feels, she can stay here. Lets go." and they quickly climbed intotheir buggy and drove off, leaving me standing there with my mouth open struck dumb! The shock was so great, I have no further memory of that time, or until some months later. By 1895 my family (Mortons) was back on the farm, the Sears children had not yet gone to college, or at least were home for summer vacations -(my memory is vague there) but they were all "grown up", as were the six older Morton children, and I wish I could give you a picture of the full, happy life of those two families on those two farms. Almost every Sunday forenoon, the Searses would all walk up the hill to our house, all dressed in Sunday best. We Mortons would also be "dressed up" too, and to-gether those sixteen people, now mostly adults, would sing hymns and have a regular program of readings, discussions of literary topics, and issues (civic and national) of the day. My sister Katherine, who by then was an accomplished pianist, would play on the square piano that my mother had bought when one of her eastern Uncles left her a little legacy; my sister Mary had a beautiful alto voice, Uncle Tom Sears had a fine bass voice, several of the young men good tenor and most of the girls good soprano voices. Those were lovely occaisons, held in the living room of this home, with its sunny bay window.

!T.B. Sears, Jr. (1834-1925) "The Journals of a Plymouth Seaman", edited by Marian Vaughn Sears Chaffin, 1989 Pilgrim Society, ISBN 0-940628-50-3. Describes the voyage of the Nathan Hanau from the log of TB Sears from Plymouth to New Orleans to Genoa Italy. First he went to sea and then he went west. Some talk about myself: In 1848 I left the Grammar School for the Plymouth High School where I took the 3 year course. Afterwards took lessons in Geometry with Mr Nat Morton, and Father taught me navigation. I then clerked one year in Alvan Morton's grocery store, and in 1853 went to the Grand Banks in the schooner Speedwell.(just launched) with Capt TE Cornish. In 1854 I started to learn the carpenters trade with Mr Thomas Pay, but, after working 6 weeks, concluded that I wasn't a carpenter, and worked about home helping Father repair one of his fishing schooners. In 1855 I went to the Grand banks again. This time in the schooner "Albert", Capt Fred Bartlett. That winter was a very cold one, and Massachusetts Bay was full, or partly full of ice brought down from the north by strong North gales. When we left Boston the NW gale was still blowing, and before we were halfway across to Cape Cod, we found that the vessel was so crank, that is, so easily tipped by the wind, that it would be unsafe to go to sea, and the Capt. decided to put into Provincetown, and take in more ballast, but as we got near the entrance of the harbor, we saw that it was full of ice, which had drifted down there, and extended several miles out into the Bay. We then tried to get out around the Cape, + to go to sea anyway, safe or unsafe, but as soon as we brought the vessel up to the wind, she went right over on her side, so there was nothing to do but square away + run into the ice, as far as we could get. This we did but the rough ice, tossed by the gale, ground against her sides, so that we thought it would sink her, and we had to take fenders and hold themn down to make some protection. About midnight so much more ice had drifted in, outside of us that the motion, where we were, gradually ceased, so that we could go below and rest. The next morning the ice extended 2 or 3 miles outside of us, and the intense cold had frozen the big chunks, into a solid mass. Not far form us lay three vessels, all of which had got caught in the same trap. The steamer "Acorn" which was running between Boston + Provincetown, the fishing schooner Wyvern with a lot of fresh fish, and a schooner from Bath, Maine. We lay in that fix several days, then another heavy North West storm set in, a nd we could see the ice outside of us begin to break up + tumble about. The Captains of the vessels held a consultation and decided that the vessels might all go to thte bottom before morning, and that the only thing to do was try for the shore before the break up reached us. We started, dragging the boat from our vessel + a life boat from the steamer, as we knew we might strike some open places, before reaching shore, which was 5 or 6 miles distant. It was nearly dark, and a driving snowstorm. One of the Cpts carried a compass, and another a lantern. There was an Irish chambermaid on the steamer + two men took her, one on each side by the arms, and so the procession started. About half way to the shore the work of dragging + lifting the boats over the rough ice became impossible and we left our boat + all took hold of the life boat. It was about midnight when we reached the shore, pretty thoroughly used up, and began to hunt for a house. Fortunatley we soon found one. A Mr Todd, who with his family turned out + did everything could be done for us. Gave us hot drinks + food, and fixed up beds on the floor, which we were very glad to occupy.

!"Captain Amasa Churchill Sears, A Plymouth Sea Captain Carries the Flag to the Near and Far East", edited by Marian Sears Chaffin, c.1988, Slowly Field, Plymouth, MA. This account of the seafaring experiences of Amasa is based largely on letters he and his wife wrote home from foreign ports in the near and far east. Both Searses and Churchills were sea captains who lived on the seashore in Plymouth, MA. The letters, starting in 1858, are so fragile and have deteriorated that many words are illegible and parts missing, but as reproduced here they give a flavor of the messages sent home, and indicate the close ties of these family members.

!"Capt Amasa Sears ed. by Marian Sears Chaffin: W H Sears (1847-1911), of Mass Inst of Technology's first graduating class (1868) wrote an appreciative travelogue describing his visit to Smyrna (now Izmir), Turkey in 1872. He has traveled on the barque Yarrington, whose master was his older brother Amasa. Walter had extensive experience in his family's sailing vessels but not professionally or to foreign ports. After graduating from MIT he had served in 1868 and 1869 on the staff of Frederick Law Olmstead and Calvert Vaux laying out Prospect Park in Brooklyn, NY. His trip to Smyrna took him to the glamorous near east while Smyrna still was major international trading port. Walter Sears wrote a series of travel reports that he sent to the Boston Daily Globe, which had just started publication. It featured his contributions under the heading "From our Own Correspondent," Feb 1872, and he signed them Searstan. His account of the journey is a model for travel writers in showing an awareness of the historical and cultural features of the city. His subjects range from water spouts at sea to harbor construction, architecture, individuals encountered, and even a hostage taken and ransomed. Entering the harbor of Smyrna, the new arrivals were greeted by a "Yankee" flag on the barque Smyrniote. Walter Sears' familiarity with handling a sailing vessel is evident in his reports, and his engineering training is shown in his description of construction work in the harbor of Smyrna, as well as in many other engineering projects visited. He had read Mark Twain's recently published account of his visit to Smyrna in the Innocents Abroad and refers to several of Twain's comments and experiences: for instance, visits to the bazar selling elaborate turbans, to a Turkish bath, and to Ephesus.
